Salute!

A WOMEN IN LAW CELEBRATION

Congratulations to our Inaugural Women in Law Honorees

Inside this special edition of Chicago Lawyer are profiles of 50 exceptional women leaders in the law who have been named as the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin & Chicago Lawyer's inaugural Salute! Women in Law Award honorees.

Each of them have this in common: they are making an incredible impact on our profession, have achieved success while mentoring and promoting other women and have been shining examples of leadership.

Earlier this year we put the call out for nominations of women lawyers who are leading the way. We received more than 500 nominations and selecting 50 honorees was not an easy job. There are so many incredible women in the Chicago legal profession. The honorees were screened by our Women's Advisory Panel and then chosen by our CDLB & CL selection committee.

We would like to give a special thank you to our Women's Advisory Board for their help with the process: Carolyn A. Blessing of Locke Lord, Sandra Frantzen of McAndrews, Hon. Cecilia Horan, Patricia Brown Holmes of Riley Safer Holmes & Cancila LLP, Kathleen McDonough of Wilson Elser, Marcia Owens of Honigman Margo Wolf O'Donnell of Benesch, Dean Jennifer Perea Rosato of DePaul College of Law and Jill Webb of the Law Offices of Jill Webb. Additionally, some of our board members were also nominated for this award and were so deserving, but were ineligible because they serve on our board. Congratulations to Patricia Holmes, Judge Horan, Marcia Owens, Dean Rosato, and Margo Wolf O'Donnell.

As you know, our plan was to host a reception and awards ceremony to celebrate all of our honorees in April but because of the pandemic, we shifted the celebration to a virtual awards announcement in May to hopefully be followed by a celebration later in the year. As the weeks passed we had hoped things would be back to normal for our third annual Women in Law Conference in December and we would be able to host the awards over lunch. Since that wasn't going to be possible, we decided to recognize these women in this special commemorative edition. Hopefully next year, we'll all be able to raise a glass together and celebrate in person.

Congratulations to this year's honorees! Thanks for all you are doing and your efforts to advance other women in our profession.

HATS OFF TO THE 2020 WOMEN IN LAW HONOREES

By Kate Conway

Congratulations to each of the impressive and deserving Inaugural Women in Law Honorees. And special congratulations to the past Presidents of the WBAI, Deane Brown and Corinne Heggie, as well as current WBAI Board Member, Sarah King.

Thank you to the Chicago Daily Law Bulletin & Chicago Lawyer for creating this important honor and doing their part to recognize and give credit to the many outstanding women leaders we have in our legal community.

The women comprising the list of 2020 Honorees span many practice areas and include litigators, authors, jurists, community leaders, advocates and activists. While they hail from diverse backgrounds and experiences, they have at least one thing in common: their career paths were made easier by the trailblazers who came before them, and the women who follow them will benefit from their hard work and great example.

Today, women are reaching new heights in the practice of law, in government, and in business. Yet, severe underrepresentation remains. One important and necessary step toward equality in the legal arena is to recognize and celebrate the invaluable contributions of our women lawyers. Congratulations again to these 50 worthy Honorees and thank you for all that you do to pave the way for future women lawyers.

Kate Conway is the President of the Women's Bar Association of Illinois and a partner at Power Rogers, LLP.

Margaret Battersby Black

PARTNER
LEVIN & PERCONTI

“Margaret is a tremendous and well-rounded trial attorney.”

Levin & Perconti partner Margaret Battersby Black is a recognized leader in personal injury law, best known for her work on behalf of clients in lawsuits involving nursing home abuse and neglect and medical malpractice, having secured numerous multi-million dollar verdicts and settlements.

Last year, Margaret sat first chair for 20 of Illinois' top settlements, more than any other lawyer, male or female, reporting in the 2019 Jury Verdict Reporter rankings. With 24 total settlements above $500,000, she set the year's high mark for the number of cases resolved for more than $500,000.

Margaret also holds the record for the single largest-ever award in an Illinois nursing home matter: a $4.1 million verdict in 2017's Grauer v. Clare Oaks, a case notable not only for the award but also the associated Illinois Appellate Court ruling affirming the right of nursing home residents to have their attorney's fees and legal costs fully covered from the defendant.

Margaret's advocacy for nursing home residents has gained international media coverage, most recently regarding her representation of a 91-year-old woman with dementia whose nursing home caretakers posted a video taunting her on social media. She is frequently interviewed as an expert on the rights of nursing home residents and their families.

Margaret has achieved noteworthy results for clients in other personal injury and malpractice matters, including a $7 million medical malpractice wrongful death verdict, an $18 million medical malpractice settlement for a brain-injured client, a $14 million birth injury settlement and a $7.5 million Jones Act settlement (another Illinois record-setter).

Beyond her own outstanding record as a trial lawyer, Margaret is committed to the advancement of women in the legal profession. When Margaret joined Levin & Perconti, she was one of three women lawyers there. The firm now includes 13 women lawyers, four of whom are partners, a testament to Margaret's active mentorship.

Margaret also mentors younger lawyers outside her own firm through the Women's Bar Association of Illinois lawyer-to-lawyer mentoring program and through her alma mater, Chicago-Kent College of Law. In addition, she recruits law students as clerks for her practice and hosts students in externships.

Margaret co-founded and chaired the Illinois Trial Lawyers' Association Women's Caucus, working to create new opportunities for women in an organization where women comprise only 15% of membership. The events she pioneered there – a Springfield lobbying day and a first-ever ITLA Women's Caucus CLE seminar – set a new standard for the organization, which honored her with the 2018 ITLA President's Award. Today, she is a member of ITLA's Executive Committee, serving as treasurer.

Margaret is also active in the Women's Bar Association of Illinois, the American Association for Justice, and the Illinois State Bar Association.

She and her husband Jeff have two children, Evelyn (7) and William (5), and she has recently taken on the role of e-learning teacher and coach, volunteering to coach her children's youth soccer and T-ball teams in her spare time.

PUBLIC DEFENDER
COOK COUNTY
Chicago-Kent College of Law

“Amy is a shining example of leadership and is part of any conversation of leading women in Chicago’s legal community.”

Amy P. Campanelli was sworn in as the tenth Public Defender of Cook County on April 1, 2015. Amy’s appointment was the culmination of 27 years of representing the indigent accused. Amy started as an Assistant Public Defender in November 1987, assigned to the Juvenile Division. Three years later she moved to the Felony Trial Division. In 1998, Amy temporarily left the Office, but continued to take criminal cases in private practice. Five years later, in 2003, she returned to the Office as an Attorney Supervisor assigned to the Felony Trial Division.

Amy became the Chief Assistant Public Defender of Cook County’s Bridgeview Courthouse in 2008. She became the Capital Case Coordinator for the Office in 2010. While coordinating all death penalty litigation resources in the Office, she organized jury focus groups, and spearheaded a two-day capital litigation conference with experts from around the globe. After the death penalty was abolished in Illinois, she served as Deputy Chief of the Homicide Task Force and Deputy Chief of the Felony Trial Division. In 2012, Amy became the Deputy Public Defender in charge of all five Suburban districts in Cook County, a position she held until her appointment as the Public Defender. She currently manages a budget of $80 million and a staff of approximately 700.

Multiple initiatives have been launched during her administration, including: the Police Station Representation Unit, making attorneys available 24/7 to respond to calls for counsel by anyone in custody throughout Cook County; the Mental Health Unit, staffed with an in-house psychologist and social workers trained to identify clients with mental health issues; and grant outreach, bringing much needed resources to her office to support clients both in and out of the courtroom. She is currently working to open an Immigration Unit within the Public Defender’s Office to provide legal representation and social help for clients who face deportation. In June 2020, the Public Defender’s Police Station Unit was recognized nationally by NACO (National Association of Counties) in the area of Criminal Justice and Public Safety.

During the COVID-19 pandemic, Amy has worked tirelessly to obtain the release of over 2000 clients from the Cook County Jail, while working with other stakeholders to provide necessary services to those released.

Recently, Chicago Magazine declared Amy as one of the 50 most powerful women in Chicago and in September 2020, Amy received the Illinois Institute of Technology Alumni Association’s 2020 Professional Achievement Award. This award honors alumni whose achievements in their fields have brought distinction to themselves as well as credit to Illinois Institute of Technology.

Amy received her Bachelor of Arts degree from the University of Illinois, Urbana and her Juris Doctor from Chicago-Kent College of Law. Amy is a lifelong member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority. She is married to Patrick Campanelli, and they have three children: Paul, Anna-belle, and Emily. Amy is the second female to serve as Public Defender of Cook County.

“Marilee is a trailblazer for women attorneys. Her integrity, intelligence and skills make her deserving of any award.”

Marilee Clausing is the rare trial attorney whose skill and success in the courtroom is matched by her leadership beyond its doors.

In court, Marilee represents hospitals and healthcare providers in catastrophic cases that are often fraught with emotions as well as high exposure—many involving birth trauma, neonatal and pediatric negligence. Her approach in such cases is rooted in both legal and medical expertise. Marilee worked for several years as an obstetrical nurse prior to becoming an attorney. That range of insight, combined with the extraordinary preparation that has become another of Marilee’s trademarks, has led to extensive trial success and established her as one of the nation’s premier medical malpractice defense attorneys. Among Marilee’s accolades is the Jury Verdict Reporter Trial Lawyer Excellence Award for Career Achievement, which recognizes her for having consistently delivered exceptional results for her clients in trials with high verdict potential.

Marilee’s legacy of achievement extends beyond the courtroom. She is a celebrated leader and mentor who founded Hall Prangle + Schoonveld’s Birth Trauma Team in 2015 and now guides the firm as its Managing Partner.

In the latter role, Marilee provides leadership, direction and operational oversight to HPS’s ten offices nationwide. She works with the Executive Committee and Equity Partnership to develop the firm’s vision and strategic plan, and also oversees the plan’s implementation. Central to that vision is an ongoing commitment to excellence, tireless client service, and a focus on training and mentorship for HPS’ next generation of attorneys.

Marilee grew up in Chicago’s southwest suburbs and earned her undergraduate degree at Marquette University in Milwaukee, then worked for several years as a nurse in both Illinois and New Jersey. Marilee continued her nursing work part-time even after she enrolled at DePaul University College of Law in Chicago, and despite that busy schedule, she excelled at DePaul, where she graduated with honors and was editor-in-chief of the DePaul Law Review.

After graduation, Marilee joined the Chicago office of law firm Lord, Bissel & Brook, where she remained for over 15 years, was named an equity partner and established herself as one of Chicago’s top trial attorneys. A JUSTICE AND HER DAUGHTERS

Sarah and Jennifer Burke interview their Mom, Illinois Supreme Court Chief Justice Anne M. Burke on her love of the law and a successful career

By Jennifer Burke and Sarah Burke

CL: What attracted you to the law and going to law school?

Justice Burke: It was never a childhood dream to go to law school or to become a lawyer or judge. In fact, I never considered going to law school until after I completed my undergraduate degree in 1976. At that time, I was already married, the mother of three small children, and expecting a fourth.

Following high school, I dropped out of college after completing only one year. After dropping out of college, I began working for at the Chicago Park District, where I taught physical education to children and young adults with mental and physical differences. I got married and started a family, while continuing to volunteer in programs and organizations concentrating on helping people with learning differences and other vulnerable populations.

The decision to attend law school was made after I graduated from college and our fourth child was 3 years old. My husband suggested that, while I was very involved with helping vulnerable populations, I could be a better advocate for them as a lawyer.

Many times we don't "listen" to our hearts or the people in our lives – family, friends, mentors – who offer advice or suggestions. I took my husband's advice, and it changed my life. The law opened my eyes to so many new ideas and opportunities for me to speak for those who have no voice of their own.

Sarah: What is the biggest factor that has helped you be successful?

Justice Burke: A loving family growing up, and parents who always encouraged me to enjoy everything – arts, sports, sewing – it was my teacher at Maria High School, Sr. Henrietta, who first steered me on the path for my future. Sr. Henrietta knew that I had difficulty reading and writing. She asked me what I most loved to do. I told her I loved sports and the arts and she told me to follow my heart. She suggested that I become a Physical Education teacher. I "listened" to her.

Sr. Henrietta also helped me with my studies so I could apply for a scholarship to study Physical Education. It was a turning point in my life. Without knowing at that time that I am dyslexic, Sr. Henrietta gave me the help and advice that gave me a path forward. I am grateful to her every day.

Sarah: What are your success habits?

Justice Burke: I am not sure that this is a "habit." However, at his point in my life, as I look back, I think the "habit" that is a part of me is taking a team approach. It began on the playing field and has been my first thought when dealing with most things in life – "Who can I put on my team"? Throughout my life, in almost every situation, my tutors, teachers, advisors, mentors, co-workers, family, and friends became my "team" and, in one way or another, they contributed to my success.

Sarah: What mistakes have you made along the way and what was the hardest decision you ever had to make?

Justice Burke: I have made many mistakes and many hard decisions in my lifetime and, undoubtedly, will make more. After all, to err is human. I just pray that the decisions I make do not cause harm. I always try my very hardest to be thoughtful and thorough when making decisions – whether in my personal or my professional life.

The hardest part about making mistakes is admitting them. I will never forget one time when I admitted making a mistake to my son, Emmett. He told me he appreciated me telling him I was sorry. His words continue to serve as a reminder to me that when you make a mistake it is important to admit it.

Jennifer: Does being a parent and grandparent impact how you do your job?

Justice Burke: Perhaps my children could answer this question far better than I can. However, let me just say that working and having children is a balancing act. Children have an impact on your attitude and mood, which affects your temperament toward them and toward work. The opposite is also true – work can have an impact on your temperament toward your children.

For me, children have been a part of my focus my entire life – as a teacher and as a coach – but never more important than as a mother. Every day of my children's lives I have loved them and worried about them – their health, their education, their safety, their social world, their marriages, and, of course, their children – my nine grandchildren. I think of and worry about them in all that I do. Cases I read cause me to reflect on their lives and how their world is impacted by societal changes – environment, safety, educational and financial well-being, and the future.

Besides the worrying, I think about the time lost – the events missed, and not being available to help out or babysit at times when work takes priority. I know all parents and grandparents experience pressures because of their jobs, and other factors, and that contributes to feelings of regret over missed opportunities at times. What I try to do is to fill in the gaps in other ways as best I can.

Perhaps my most compelling worry for my children is my concern about the pressures they have balancing work and family. They are amazing parents. They focus on family first, spending time together and taking every occasion to enjoy the moment. They also make sure to set aside some special time for each child. I am grateful that they are such loving and caring parents. I am very blessed and proud of my children – all five of them.

Jennifer: What hobbies do you enjoy and why is it important to have them in your life?

Justice Burke: The activities I enjoy today are far different from the activities I participated in over the years. I was always athletic, so when I was younger, I enjoyed all types of sports, as well as art, dancing, and baton twirling. These were at the top of the list of things I enjoyed in my off hours. They were even part of my working hours when I was a physical education teacher. Then, I had the perfect world –doing activities I loved as my job.

Today, I still enjoy sports, but the activities have changed over time. Now, I walk – each morning I walk a mile on a treadmill. I also do other exercises, such as climbing four flights of stairs six or seven times every day. I also enjoy painting and have taken a sculpting class. These activities I do for my personal enjoyment. They are my retreat and permit me to be challenged in a personal way – to walk faster or longer, or to create a painting or sculpture I actually like.

I also love to visit museums and to read mystery stories. I have been fortunate to be able to travel the world to meet and see the people and places I have read about.

My hobbies and activities have been a comfort and have offered me the opportunity to appreciate my good fortune in having a wonderful family and a blessed life.

Jennifer: What personal skill or trait do you have that helps the court work together?

Justice Burke: I have always believed that the foundation of my ability to work with others comes from the lessons I learned from being a member of a team, as well as my experiences as a teacher, a coach, and a supervisor at work.

The formula I learned is to, first, listen to the individuals with whom you will be working; hear everyone's thoughts and views on the topic or task at hand. Next, identify all the elements of the issue or problem—the pros and cons. Then create a plan, prioritizing the tasks, and have the team members choose which tasks to work on.

This formula, which I learned on the sports field, the basketball court, and from my dance teams, served me well then and still is my starting point when I need to understand an issue, task, or problem. I find, too, that regardless of the individual interests of the group members, this method helps build consensus and allows everyone to work together as a team.

CL: With the pandemic, lawyers and judges are trying to navigate a whole new frontier. What advice do you have for women in the profession on how to remain relevant, successful, and still maintain a balance at home?

Justice Burke: I believe we should all look at the pandemic as having presented us with the “challenge we did not want, but the challenge we needed.” I say this because the pandemic has opened our eyes and allowed us to see that our justice system has been lumbering along, with us being stagnant in many ways.

This is partly due to the structure of the justice system in Illinois. There are 102 counties, 24 judicial circuits and 5 judicial districts. Each of the 102 counties has its courts, its own clerk of the court, its own sheriff, and its own administrators. According to our State Constitution: “General administrative and supervisory authority over all courts is vested in the Supreme Court and shall be exercised by the Chief Justice in accordance with its rules.” But as a practical matter, what does this actually mean? The answer is difficult to quantify.

With the pandemic, however, the Illinois Supreme Court, based on the general authority of this Constitutional provision, convened the Leadership COVID-19 Task Force. From the first day of the pandemic in this State, we called together all justice stakeholders and justice partners to join with us on a ZOOM call to talk about the issues facing the justice system in Illinois and what steps needed to be taken to reach our goal of ensuring that access to justice remained available at all levels – trial courts, the Appellate Courts and the Supreme Court.

Today, as I write this answer, I can honestly say we have succeeded in this goal. Under the leadership of the Supreme Court, numerous meetings have been convened with the COVID Task Force, the Conference of Chief Judges, and the Supreme Court’s Committees on Mental Health and Juvenile Justice. In addition, there have been a myriad of Webinars, Summits, and Training Programs regarding the use of technology in fulfilling our Constitutional duty to provide access to justice for all. I am very pleased to be able to say that, throughout our State justice system, courts have embraced technology, holding remote status calls, hearings, and trials, as well as, utilizing e-filings and electronic signature capabilities.

With regard to women in the law, I believe the pandemic has actually offered new and greater opportunities for success. For several years now, the number of women attending law school had been equal to or greater than the number of male law students. (In my own family there are three women lawyers and the men don’t stand a chance when the three of us get together!) And yet, too often, women were under pressure to put their careers ahead of their personal life and their families in order to be successful. The pandemic has opened up new possibilities for working from home and tailoring work schedules to meet our needs.

& Bueschel congratulates

AURORA AUSTRIACO

I believe we should all look at the pandemic as having presented us with the “challenge we did not want, but the challenge we needed.” I say this because the pandemic has opened our eyes and allowed us to see that our justice system has been lumbering along, with us being stagnant in many ways.

Patricia C. Bobb & Associates and Meyers & Flowers congratulates Patricia C. Bobb on being named a 2020 Salute! Women in Law honoree.

Women are perfect for the law in so many ways. They are nurturing, inquisitive, creative, have common sense, and are capable of prioritizing what is important while maintaining a sense of humor. Young women today are far more able to discern their own skills and needs and apply them in their personal and professional lives. They also have more freedom to make choices, without society causing them to second guess their decisions – whether to marry or have a partner, whether to have children, or whether to take a particular job or position. In some ways, the pandemic has expanded that freedom.

Sarah F. King

PARTNER
CLIFFORD LAW OFFICES
DePaul University College of Law

“Sarah has two significant characteristics that make her an exceptional lawyer: creativity and confidence.”

Sarah F. King, partner at Clifford Law Offices, focuses her practice on medical negligence of health care professionals. She works tirelessly to investigate and prepare complex medical malpractice cases to achieve justice for those who have been harmed by medical negligence. She works with a dedication and tenacity to get to the bottom of what actually happened and what proper practices should have been used to prevent injuries related to medical care. It is this passion that makes her one of today's top Chicago medical malpractice lawyers.

Sarah has had substantial trial experience as an attorney of record in many of the firm's trials. In less than a decade, Sarah F. King has received verdicts and settlements totaling more than $300 million. In 2019, Sarah obtained a record $101 million verdict on behalf of a baby boy who was brain damaged at birth when his external fetal monitoring strips were ignored for six hours. Experts on behalf of the plaintiff testified that he would have been born a normal baby if hospital nurses and other medical personnel would have alerted doctors to the abnormalities and performed an emergency C-section.

Sarah, along with partner Bradley Cosgrove, tried a case that gained international attention for the negligent prescription of Yasmin. A 37-year-old woman took the medication for less than two weeks and suffered a debilitating stroke. Following a two-week trial, the jury awarded her $13.55 million in March 2014. Sarah also tried a case alongside partner Keith A. Hebeisen, leader of the medical malpractice team at Clifford Law Offices, in November 2013 that involved the wrongful death of a 33-year-old mother who sustained a massive hemorrhage during a C-section. Following a three-week trial, the jury returned a verdict of $15.55 million for the family. In January 2013, Sarah tried another case with Hebeisen and obtained a $2.225 million verdict for the wrongful death of a 31-week fetus. She is hard working and unafraid to take the case to verdict.

Sarah co-founded the Illinois Trial Lawyers' Association Women's Caucus whose goal is to encourage female leadership within the profession and act as a resource for mentoring young female trial attorneys. As vice-chair, Sarah organized its first community service project, preparing meals for residents of a Chicago area women's shelter. Sarah serves on the Women's Bar Association of Illinois Board of Directors and is a Co-Chair of its Judicial Evaluation Committee. Sarah is President for Women Everywhere, a nonprofit organization comprised of attorneys and judges dedicated to creating opportunities for women through education and community service. For years, Sarah has aided in increasing funding for scholarships to senior high school girls aspiring to pursue legal careers. In 2017, she was named one of Crain's Custom Media's Most Influential Women in Law in Chicago. She has published several articles, some of which have been published in national publications such as the highly regarded American Bar Association Litigation Journal.

She often leads such litigation nationally, serving as co-lead counsel, liaison counsel or key committee positions for discovery and trial. Shannon presently serves as co-lead counsel in the Cook County Johnson & Johnson talcum powder litigation and also in the Cook County DePuy hip litigation. She also serves as liaison counsel in several matters pending in various state and federal courts, and recently led the Pella Proline Windows litigation to a successful conclusion of a $34.75 million settlement. In the Cook County talcum powder litigation, McNulty prevented the defendants' removal of dozens of cases from the victims' home forum, a litigation history subsequently relied on by hundreds of women who suffered ovarian cancer. Recently, she was named one of the five Lead Counsel in the only multi-district litigation involving Covid-19 business interruption claims.

Her successes in Chicago as a personal injury and wrongful death attorney include the multiple death and severe personal injury cases of those who were trapped in the fire at the Cook County Administration Building in October 2003. The high-profile cases dealt with the workings of the 911 response system in Chicago, something with which Shannon has a great deal of experience through her earlier work in the administration of the Chicago Police Department where she served as the Director of Administration in the Bureau of Operational Services. In this critical role, she was Chief of Staff to the First Deputy Superintendent. She is part of the legal team that handles cases involving the rollover of a number of sport utility vehicles that have resulted in the deaths or serious injuries of their occupants. Shannon also was involved in the trial of a small plane crash case at a Chicago suburban airport that killed everyone aboard. That trial resulted in a $12 million verdict.

Shannon attended night law school at DePaul while working full-time and completed law school one year ahead of schedule. She holds a Masters of Science degree from the School of Management of Public Services at DePaul University, which bestowed upon her the American Society of Public Administrators' Student of the Year Award. She graduated cum laude from Loyola University in Chicago with a Bachelor of Science degree. She has been named a Leading Lawyer, a Super Lawyer and a Best Lawyer.

Shannon gives back to the Chicago community having worked in the Albany Park neighborhood on crime prevention efforts, which resulted in her being recognized for outstanding service by the U.N.I.T.E. civic organization. She has worked with several associations of public housing residents throughout the city for the purpose of organizing and fulfilling the needs of children, including school supplies, holiday meals and gifts as well as mentoring opportunities with police command staff. She served as a founding Board Member of the Chicago Police Memorial Foundation that raises money for protective vests for officers.

Mary Wilson

MANAGING PARTNER
DENTONS
University of Chicago Law School

“Mary embodies strong female leadership, leveraging her experiences to innovate, inspire and pay it back.”

Dentons' first female U.S. Managing Partner, Mary Wilson is a national finance, health care law and tax-exempt organization lawyer who has served in various leadership roles during her tenure. She embodies strong female leadership, leveraging her experiences to innovate, inspire and pay it back. Mary helps lead Dentons' innovation through Golden Spike, as the first truly national law firm, while also representing borrowers, banks and underwriters in tax-exempt bond issues, loans and other finance transactions aggregating billions of dollars in principal amounts.

The great conundrum of the US legal market is that, while it is the largest legal market in the world, US law firms are disproportionately small compared to firms in other nations, both in terms of headcount and the number of communities served. Dentons launched Project Golden Spike to solve this challenge and offer clients the benefits of the first law firm providing services broadly and deeply throughout the US. Golden Spike utilizes a distinctive partnership model that enables member firms to maintain their existing partnerships or corporate structures, leadership teams, and other key attributes, meaning that they will reap all the benefits of a global firm without losing their local relationship with clients. Mary has been key in facilitating collaboration and creating processes across member firms and practice groups, including joint participation in an upcoming Summit on women, retention and success at Dentons.

In addition, Mary is an active member of Dentons' US Women's Leadership and Growth Network, a women's mentorship initiative entitled Dentons Women LEAD. Women LEAD (Leadership, Entrepreneurism, Advancement, Development) is a network that plays a critical role in supporting and building the success of women in the Firm. The network's mission is to foster an environment that attracts, develops and inspires women business leaders and builds networks with our clients and the communities in which we work. Example activities include: Sponsorship program, New mother outreach programs, Business development planning programs, Networking Forums, and Women's events. Mary also helped design a new program called Dentons' Executive Mentoring program that recently launched. This program pairs Dentons US Board members with diverse associates in a 360 mentoring program to provide new opportunities for diverse associates while simultaneously sharing the views and experiences of these associates with Board members. She serves as a mentor herself in the inaugural class, showcasing her commitment to the program. She was also part of the faculty for the 2019 Dentons' Preparing for Rain Program which focuses on supporting and training women senior managing associates and new partners in the art of business development.

Furthermore, Mary is the former Chicago office managing partner and a continuing member of Dentons' US Board. She has served on the Chicago leadership board of the American Diabetes Association and the boards of KEEN Chicago and Heartland Health Outreach.

VICE CHAIR, TRIAL PRACTICE GROUP
BENESCH
University of Illinois College of Law

“Giving back to the next generation of attorneys is critical to Nicole.”

Nicole Wrigley has litigated some of the largest and most high-profile cases in the country. She represented the plaintiffs in the largest defamation case in U.S. history, the defendant in one of the largest auditor liability cases ever tried, and Fortune 100 companies in multi-billion dollar securities fraud claims.

Her unmatched experience in these “bet the company” cases led Benchmark Litigation to select Nicole as part of its “Under 40 Hot List” for Commercial Litigation in 2017.

Nicole’s litigation and trial practice is diverse, ranging from nine-figure business disputes to multibillion-dollar class actions to complex MDL proceedings, where she has served as national and coordinating counsel for industry-leading companies. Her subject matter expertise is likewise diverse. She has represented individuals and companies in litigation involving product liability, breach of contract, tortious interference, securities fraud, defamation and disparagement, negligence, professional liability and mass tort, and CERCLA.

The results that Nicole and her teams achieved in these cases and others not only served the best interest of her client but, on several occasions, also changed the law with precedent-setting decisions. Regardless of the stakes involved, in cases large and small, Nicole approaches litigation as a zealous and respectful advocate. Her clients have described her as “a creative and aggressive, but practical advocate” and as having “an outstanding work ethic.” She has been described by opposing counsel as having a “great presence in front of a jury.”

Nicole’s clients also seek out her expertise outside of litigation. She has counseled clients in a variety of industries on interacting with the media and crisis management. She advises companies and individuals regarding their interactions with federal regulators and responding to government inquiries, and Nicole is often sought out by her clients to assist with the development of internal strategies and procedures to avoid litigation.

An Illinois native, Nicole is committed to giving back to her community. Her pro bono practice has included class actions for prisoners in the Illinois Department of Corrections system, the Chicago Coalition for the Homeless, and Chicago public school teachers. She has also represented individuals on a pro bono basis in immigration, custody, and divorce proceedings.

Nicole previously served on the Associate Board for the American Cancer Society and as a director for Seven Generations Ahead, a sustainability organization.
